

The River

For English today, you are going to write your 'The River' poem in neat on a double page in your English book.

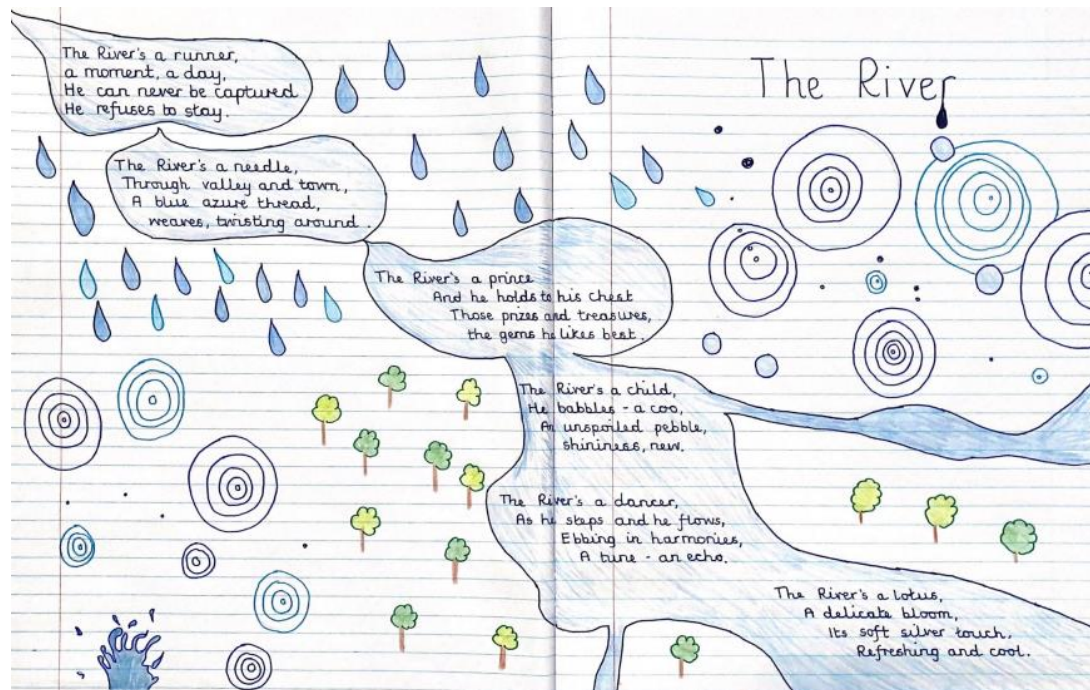

Start by finding the next double page in your English book.

How you present your poem is up to you, but make sure you are:

- o Using your neatest handwriting
- o Writing all six verses (if you haven't done this already, you will need to do so before writing in neat)

Decorate your double after you have completed you writing

Some examples are below that could help with your ideas, including Miss Powis' double page.

A River's Journey

The river makes his way along the mountain path he chooses Shamelessly eroding rocks, as on his way he grunts. Starting at a steady pace, he's happy to go slow And meanwhile smaller tributaries come to join the flow. Then he descends the mountain as excitedly he splashes, Splashing, splashing, tumbling, while onwards he proceeds. Then all at once the heady heights encourage him to dive... Enthusiasm leads the way, the w a t e r f a l l arrives! Acrobatic, somersaulting. D I V I N G From the top The river reaches base with one amightly belly flop! His bubbling intensity Soon begins to show. s contribute, so he begins to grow Swifly riding on the rocks. He weaves his way along. Passing through the estuary But keen to carry on. Then finally, his destination Comes within his view; the sea is beckoning from waters deep and oh so blue... So finally, what started as a river's gentle moon is all encapsulated in the wide and mighty ocean.
